Hauting and Freighting.

The address of the luncheon Thursday was made by E. H. Yale, of the Western Trainfer and Storage company. His talk was on the transfer and storage business. He told the El Pascans of the wonderful advance made in El Pasc since transportation lines entered the city in 1881. Prior to that time, he said, froight was transported from Indianola overland by way of San Antonio to El Pasc, at a cost of $7 100 pounds, and it was 48 days on the road. At present the freight rate to El Pasc from New York is only $1.50 a hundred. This demonstrated, he said, what rak, toad transportation has done for El Tasc. The Santa Fe was next, arriving tere, he said, was the S. P., on May 12, 581. The Santa Fe was next, arriving tere, he said, on June 11, 1881. Governor Will Bar Cattle Importations to Safeguard Home Herds.

Albuquerque, N. M., Dec. 2.—W. J. Linwood, secretary of the state cattle sanitary board, today stated that Gov. W. C. McDonald had announced his in-

New Mexico cattle with foot and mouth disease is ended.

Mr. Linwood did not say whether the proclamation would affect the shipment of cattle across the state. Large numbers of Mexican cattle have been imported during the last few months and cattle from that country are considered a source of danger. The chief source is in the importation of eastern dairy cattle, it is believed.

Arizona Joins Quarantine. Arizona Joins Quarantine.

Phoenix, Ariz, Dec. 2.—Upon the recommendation of the livestock samitary board, governor Hunt has issued a proclamation prohibiting the importation into Arizona of cattle from any state except California, and from California only after rigid inspection at the border. The proclamation continues into effect until terminated by another, which will be issued when the present epidemic of foot and mouth disease has been wiped out. About ten days ago the governor issued a proclamation quarantining Arizona against cattle from states east and north of Texas.

Find Wounded Soldiers Who Otherwise Would Be Overlooked.

Paris, France, Dec. 3.—Notwithstand-ng much that has already been record-d of them, the ambulance dogs have of yet heen given full recognition for he part they are playing in the war,

velopment of modern methods of warfare.

"The infantryman today does his fighting from the ground, under any
over he can find," he said, "creeping,
through thickets, biding in ditches, behand hedges and every spot that is likely to conseat him from the enemy.
Naturally the same cover hides him from the view of the stretcher bearers picking up the wounded after the battle.

"Thin duty is further complicated by the fact that it must be done at night,
as the intensity of fire makes it impossible to pick up wounded on the field during an engagement. In this work of seeking the wounded at night the ambulance dog becomes indispensable, since lights are forbidden to the stretcher bearers for fear of exposing positions to the enemy; consequently the salvation of hundreds of wounded
soldlers depends upon the sharp scentintelligence and devotion of the ambulance dog.

The "Case of Tom."

The "Case of Tom."

The "case of Tom" is thus:
Gaston Durand of the 36th infantry
fell in one of the violent engagements
in the Argonne forest, wounded in the arm by a fragment of a shell, with a bullet in his jaw and nearly scalped by a blow from a saher. He tried to rise, but a heavy weight fell upon him and then he lost consciousness. The first thing he became aware of was a feeling that resembled a caress upon his forehead. He opened his eyes and there was Tom, one of the ambulance dogs, affectionately inpping his torn head. He tried to rise, but heavy weight that had borne him down was still there. It was the body of one of his comrades who had fallen with a bullet through his heart Inversemble to extricate himself, he and fallen with a bullet through his heart.

Impossible to extricate himself, he finally succeeded in getting to a sitting posture. His cap was gone and that explained why Tom had not gone hack to the ambulance for help. Durand looked, and Tem scarched but no cap was to be found. "Go, Tom, and fetch the comrades." Durand cried. A half hour later Tom went into camp and sciaing the first soldier's coat in his steeth, began fugsing at him. The soldier did not understand. Then Tombarked appealingly but with no more effect. Finally he barked menacingly, with no result. Then he doctor came along. He understood and Tom gave a yelp of joy when he realized that he had succeeded. Directed by him the doctor and the stretcher bearers soon found Durand, hidden in a thicket, where probably he would have passed unnoticed until he had either starved or slied from his wounds, had it not been

Save Hundreds of Lives.

In some cases where is soldier's cap could not be found, the og has torn open his knapsack and anyted out something that he could dry back to show that he had made discovery.

a discovery.

The National society for the training of ambulance dogs has aiready sent 100 of these animals into the field and 17 more are soon to go. Dr. Troussalat, director of the sanitary service at the ministry of war has authorized the training of stretcher bearers with the dogs, so that they may be able to work better in harmony, the dog knowing the man and the man knowing the dog.

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR BLUFFS TURKS AND SAVES REFUGEES

TURKS AND SAVES REFUGEES

London, Eng., Dec. 2.—Henry Morgenthau, American ambassador to Turkey, bluffed the Ottoman government, made it good and virtually compelled Turkey to allow the English colony to leave the country after war had been declared, according to a letter from Atheus, Greece. The government had announced that English people would be held in Turkey.

The action of the Turks caused a panic among the British refugees, but the American amhassador assured them he would endeavor to get them away next day. The refugees passed a terrible night of anxiety, and besides the police were harsh and brutal.

The sights he wilnessed made ambassador Morgenthau determined to make the Turka respect his wishes. He formally advised the Turkish government that unless the British colony was allowed to depart he would demand his passports and take them all as his private guests on his special

The Turks, the letter said, had no desire to fight America as well as the nilies, so they gave in, but took revenge by assessing the refugers an arbitrary and illegal tax of from $5 to $100 each. The next day the colony assembled at the station. Ambassador Morgenthau was there and personally supervised even the smallest details of the departure, even distributing gandy to the children before the train left.

Words can hardly express the gralitude due him, the letter concludes.
